

MISSION STATEMENT

The University of Connecticut School of Medicine's Division of Graduate Medical Education is dedicated to the oversight and management of high quality, comprehensive, and culturally relevant health care in an effort to improve the overall health of the citizens of Connecticut. The Division of Graduate Medical Education is committed to providing outstanding residency and fellowship programs and highly qualified trained physicians. We do this by promoting academically vigorous programs of education which help to foster physicians' professional development as skilled, ethical, and compassionate independent physicians that are knowledgeable and capable of meeting the challenges of a changing healthcare environment. GME promotes research and scholarly activity in our residents, fellows, and faculty. Lastly, we work to collaborate with our affiliated hospitals and training sites so that our residents and fellows are integral and transformative members of the community with the goals of patient safety and quality care.
